Texas parks board chairman Dave Colp maintained spirited correspondence with Mather's National Conference on State Parks throughout the 1920s. Yet the conference's slogan for a roughly 500-acre "state park every hundred miles" failed to move Colp and Neff away from their pursuit of fifty-acre "small parks" and "beauty spots" as "waysides" for intercity motorists.

This excellent study chronicles the growth of the Texas state park system from its beginnings in the 1880s to its maturity in the 1940s. Parks were established at first around historic sites from the Texas Revolution, and not until the 1920s did Governor Pat Neff envision the kind of modern park system that eventually developed. Even then, it was not until the 1930s that the system began to ...
