A ground-breaking new vision of humankind is quickly spreading into the mainstream of our self-understanding. We are no longer standing apart from nature, so the new belief goes: we are enmeshed in it. Some authors even assert that nature and humans are one and the same.1 This comes not just as a philosophical claim but [...]

Self-awareness plays a critical role in how we understand ourselves and how we relate to others and the world. Being self-aware allows you to evaluate yourself in relation to others. For people who have an extremely high sense of self-awareness, excessive self-consciousness can result.

Leah C. Fowler's Narrative Inquiry 7

In poetics, the private sphere represents the authentic self. The private sphere reflects the personal and individualistic side to society, and includes the side of the life that rejects conformity and institutional participation. The private sphere embraces passion, desire and bonds between members of a society.

Aristotle's Poetics further contributes to a deeper understanding of how narrative can assist in the proper response of the human person to vulnerability. In this chapter, I focus specifically on the question of the value of performed tragedy for the community of those who witness its performance, as a way of deepening this question about how and why narrative is helpful for responding to ...

Eliot's poetics of self allows us to imagine how the movement of conversion involves a new relation to time and history. It also suggests that the self is a mystery, and that the indeterminate nature of experience, rather than a fixed concept of the past, is what opens up the possibility of repetition as the 'space' of change.

Self-pity is probably the best general description, but we have to see the self-pity as also purposive, as an attempt to come to terms with the pain of being rejected as a lover. From my theoretical position then this poem invites us to participate self-reflexively in a process of negotiating the pain of rejection by the seductive ennobling promised by self-pity.
