Ricoh KR-10 (Operating)

My favorite camera of the Ricohs is the KR-5 Super2, because it is the newest, while it is the smallest, simplest most basic manual shutter only camera, with LED exposure indication so I like to use it The problem I have with the KR-10 is that the black match needle is almost invisible in lower light, right when it is needed for manual exposure.

There is the KR-10M, the KR-10 super and this model although the KR-10M is a completely different camera to the other two. Ricoh KR-10 description The KR-10 is a reasonably light weight camera which is easy enough to carry around, and seems to have most of the features which people would want in an auto exposure 35mm camera.

My XR-10 is almost identical to the KR-10 Super documented in this manual. I believe the XR-10 was sold as the KR-10X in some markets. If your aperture-priority Ricoh SLR looks similar to the one shown on page 2, most of this manual probably applies (insert standard disclaimer)

Ricoh KR-10 vs Pentax XX | Photo.net Photography Forums

This model, which is equivalent to the Ricoh KR-10, is very well-designed and has many nice features that would make it a great primary body in a K-mount kit. Quiet and accurate electronic focal-plane metal shutter, battery-dependent but luckily it takes easily available (and inexpensive) 1.5v silver button batteries (2).

The KR-10 is a good solid K mount SLR, I have a feeling it was made by Cosina with one eye on the Nikon FE. I always preferred its siblings the Ricoh XR-2(s) they shared the same basic design but the XR-2 added a few extra functions like a depth of field preview button which both the Me-Super and KR-10 lack.
