Universal Declaration of Human Rights | United Nations

The First Amendment (Amendment I) to the United States Constitution prevents the government from making laws which regulate an establishment of religion, prohibit the free exercise of religion, or abridge the freedom of speech, the freedom of the press, the right to peaceably assemble, or the right to petition the government for redress of grievances.

The right to freedom of religion or belief and its ...

In many ways, each new generation seems to enjoy greater liberties and rights than the generation before it. Indeed, we recognize and cherish as rights and freedoms today many things that are nowhere mentioned in the Constitution. Among these various freedoms, religious liberty has been called our nation's "First Freedom."
